Recycled Polyester often referred to as rPET (recycled polyethylene terephthalate), is a sustainable fabric made from recycled plastic materials, primarily plastic bottles.

The process involves:

- Collection: Used plastic bottles are collected and sorted.
- Cleaning: The collected plastics are cleaned to remove labels, caps, and other contaminants.
- Shredding: The clean plastic is then shredded into small flakes.
- Melting and Extrusion: The flakes are melted and extruded into polyester fibers.
- Spinning: These fibers are spun into yarn, which can then be woven or knitted into fabric.

Recycled polyester helps reduce the demand for virgin polyester (which is derived from petroleum), minimizes waste, and decreases energy consumption and carbon emissions associated with the production of new polyester. It's used in various products, including clothing, bags, and upholstery, and is valued for its durability, moisture-wicking properties, and ability to be recycled again.
